Joe's Pro Tips:

Have you ever heard your brakes make a high-pitched squeaking or squealing sound? That sound is a warning that something is wrong with your brakes, and it should not be ignored! Your brakes have a metal "brake wear indicator" that is designed to hit the rotor and emit that sound when your brake pads are almost worn down all the way. If you hear that sound, you need to take your car in to get new brake pads as soon as possible. If you wait too long your brake pads will wear down completely, and the metal-on-metal contact will damage your rotors and reduce your ability to brake. If you ever have any questions about your vehicle's brakes, let us know!

Car Repair Myths

Going to an unauthorized repair shop will void your warranty.

This is a myth that persists mainly thanks to dealerships' desire to keep customers coming back to them. Though rarely stated explicitly, dealerships will heavily imply that you can only service your car with them, and that taking your new car to an outside source for repair may actually void your warranty. The truth is, any repairs covered under your warranty can be handled by practically any service provider; all you have to do is save your receipts to prove what was actually done and how much you paid for it. You can't void your warranty this way, and it may end up being more convenient for you overall.

Regular maintenance isn't necessary any more.

There are hundreds of little things that can go wrong with your car: everything from your wheels getting knocked slightly out of alignment to a tire becoming underinflated. These minor items won't typically have a large impact on your car's performance; in fact, you probably won't even notice them. But over time, they'll start to cause more substantial forms of damage to your vehicle. This is especially true for safety mechanisms such as brakes, or components of major systems of moving parts, like the interior of your engine. Because of this, it's vital to bring your car in for regular maintenance, so you can catch these little problems early and pro-actively — before they can cause any more damage.

You never need to change your car's oil.

Unfortunately, there's a more recent myth that's arisen because of growing awareness of the previous fact. When people hear they might only need to change their oil every 10,000 miles, some start to write off oil changes altogether, in the belief somehow that they never need to change their car's oil again. Make no mistake, contemporary oil and engines are impressive, and can withstand a ton of use and abuse, but that doesn't mean they're unbreakable. It certainly doesn't mean you don't have to change your oil regularly. Keep your car on a regular schedule if you want it to survive.

Cheaper gas can harm your car's engine.

On the surface, this idea might make sense, but there's no empirical justification for it. For most other items and services in the auto industry, you get what you pay for: If a car is more expensive, generally it's been built by a more reliable manufacturer using more reliable or high-end parts. More expensive oil tends to perform better than cheap oil. And to some extent, more expensive gas from a top-level provider can be more useful than cheap, low-end gas. The former contains additives such as cleaners and protectants that may be able to keep your engine in top shape for longer. However, cheap gas can't actively harm your car. All gas must meet certain quality standards that are set at the national level, so you never have to worry that whatever you're putting in your car isn't safe.

Comedy Corner

A woman walked into the kitchen to find her husband stalking around with a fly swatter.

"What are you doing?" she asked.

"Hunting flies." he replied.

"Oh, killed any?" she said.

"Yep, 3 males, 2 females," came the answer.

Intrigued, the wife asked, "How can you tell them apart?"

"3 were on a beer can, 2 were on the phone."

A wife, being the romantic sort, sent her husband a text: "If you are sleeping, send me your dreams. If you are laughing, send me your smile. If you are eating, send me a bite. If you are drinking send me a sip. If you are crying, send me your tears. I love you!" The husband, typically non-romantic, replied: "I am on the toilet. Please advise."

Leaving the Store, I couldn't find my keys. They weren't in my pockets. Suddenly I realized I must have left them in the car. Frantically I headed for the parking lot. My husband has scolded me many times for leaving my keys in the car's ignition. He's afraid that the car could be stolen. As I looked around the parking lot, I realized he was right. The parking lot was empty. I immediately called the police. I gave them my location, confessed that I had left my keys in the car, and that it had been stolen. I then made the most difficult call of all to my husband, "I left my keys in the car and it's been stolen." There was a moment of silence. I thought the call had been disconnected, but then I heard his voice. "Are you kidding me?" he barked, "I dropped you off!" Now it was my turn to be silent. Embarrassed, I said, "Well, come and get me." He retorted, "I will, just as soon as I convince this cop that I didn't seal your damn car!"
Welcome to the golden years...
